PETER D'ASCOLI

New York designer Peter D'Ascoli has been traveling the world studying decorative arts for thirty years, and his work in fashion and interiors is driven by curiosity and inspired by a passion for historic decoration and exotic cultures. Formally trained in Textile Design at the Fashion Institute of Technology in Manhattan, his early work with handcrafted Indian textiles for the government of India has given him an enduring love for the art and culture of that ancient civilization.

In 2006 D'Ascoli founded the Talianna Studio in New Delhi – a design and product development atelier – creating luxury fabrics for interior decoration and fashion. Today the company creates and markets women's apparel and home products under the D'ASCOLI brand, and custom luxury fabrics for the interior design trade under the PETER D'ASCOLI name.

"These bespoke walls and floors have been created in stoneware porcelain by an amalgamation of art, ceramic techniques and design. What I see today is that a gap needs to be filled in the design world, keeping this ethos in mind, we have tried to recast this historical surface into a new design avatar which is extremely versatile and timeless."

- Poonam Gupta, Director, FCML Surfaces

The design narrative of The Incidental Collection is based in tessellations in which the permutations and combinations of different shapes are closely fitted together, which can be used differently to create bespoke wall art and surfaces in every space. Inspired by the visual imagery of the fashion designers, FCML's technical knowledge, and experience for the requirements for the luxury market these tiles are made in India with unique and unusual techniques and fine tuned by hand, taking innovation to its threshold

Jamavar

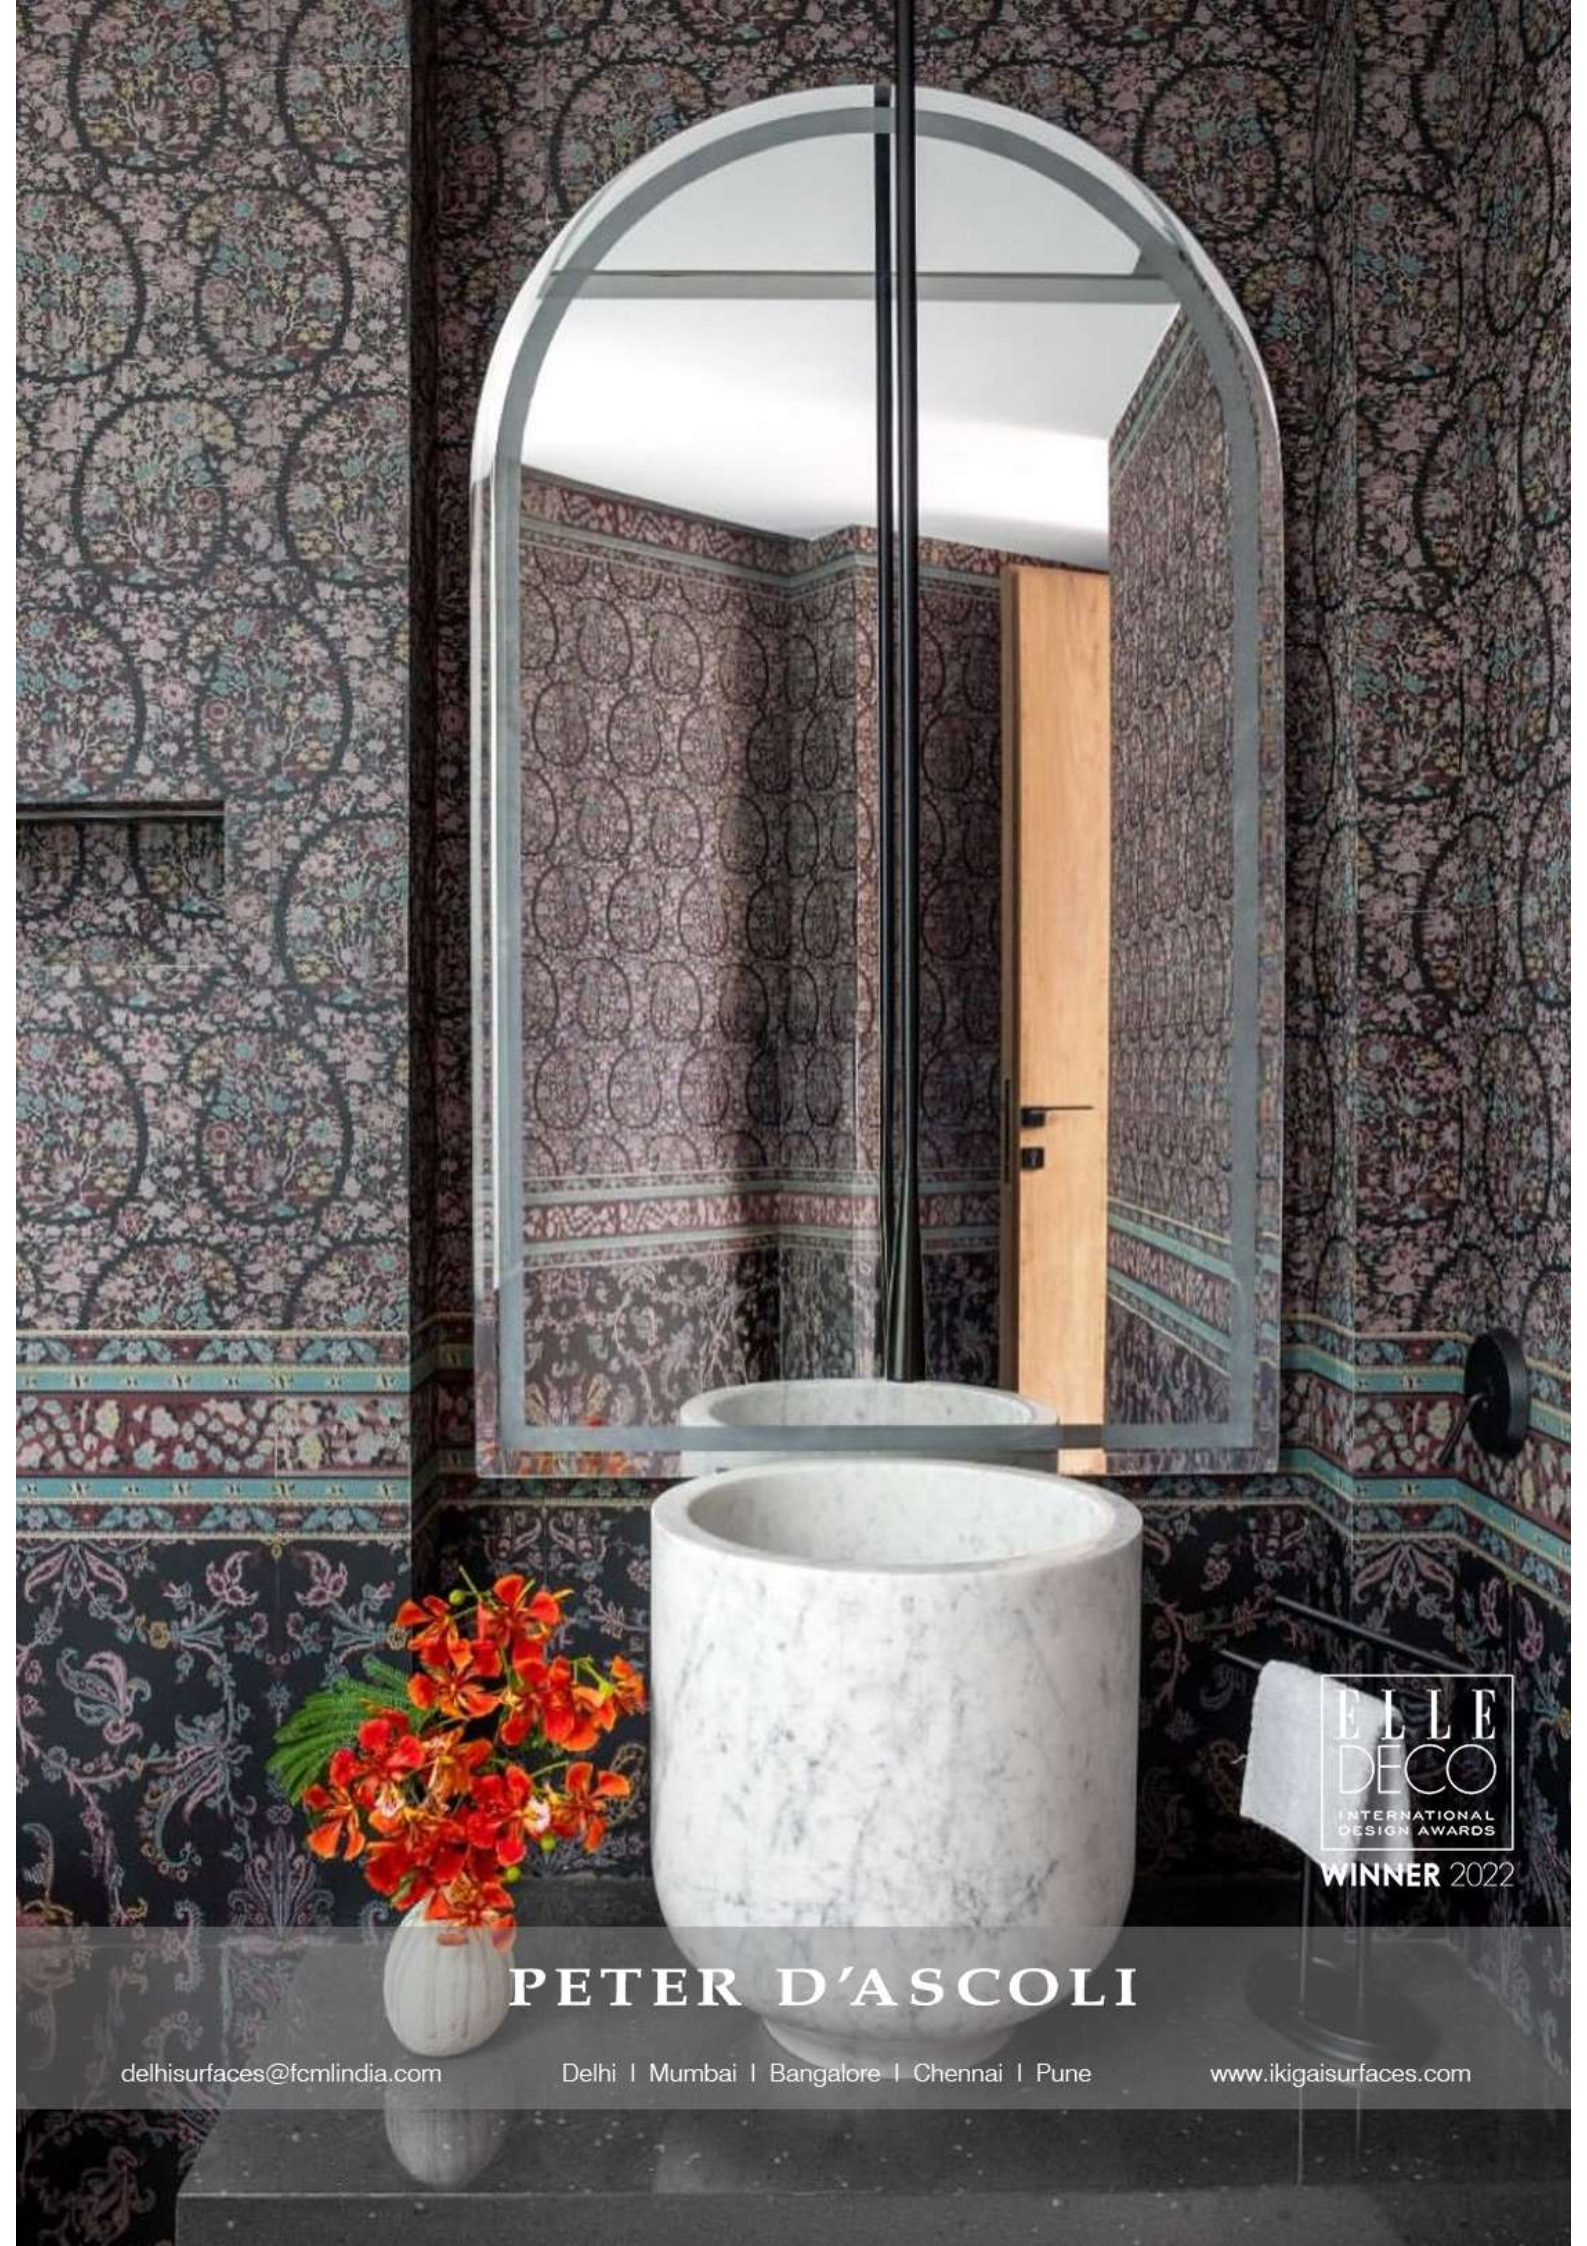

The Jamavar collection of ceramic tiles by PETER D'ASCOLI for FCML is inspired by the famous paisley shawls from India's legendary Valley of Kashmir. The New York designer has captured the intricacy and drama of the original embroidered fabrics that set the style at the Mughal court and led European fashion in the 18th and 19th centuries. Now available in three colors, black, white, and shahtoosh, the collection features borders and allover designs ideal for both floors and wall cladding.
